

Buenos Aires became the capital of Argentina in 1852, when the city was chosen by the Argentine Congress. The city was founded by Juan Manuel de Rosas, a prominent Argentine politician and military leader, who was appointed governor of Buenos Aires in 1829. The city was founded as a port of call for the British Navy, and it grew rapidly as a result of its strategic location. The city was founded on the banks of the Rio de la Plata, and it was one of the most important cities in South America at the time. The city was founded by Juan Manuel de Rosas, who was a prominent Argentine politician and military leader. The city was founded as a port of call for the British Navy, and it grew rapidly as a result of its strategic location. The city was founded on the banks of the Rio de la Plata, and it was one of the most important cities in South America at the time.